Paige is a Private Investment Funds associate in the Washington, D.C. office. She advises private investment sponsors on all aspects of fund formation and management and has significant experience representing institutional investors in connection with their investment activities. Paige also advises clients on small business investment company (SBIC) licensing and regulatory matters.

Paige has significant experience advising onshore and offshore private fund sponsors on capital raising, marketing, and drafting and negotiating offering documents. She also advises clients on regulatory, compliance, and operational issues, including on sponsor-carried interest and management company setups during both active fundraising and operational stages. Paige's sponsor clientele have included established and emerging private equity, real estate, venture capital, and fund-of-funds sponsors.

Paige advises institutional investors including endowments, governmental pension plans, insurance companies, health systems, family offices, and fund-of-funds on their private capital investment strategies. She also counsels private fund sponsors, buyers and sellers in secondary transactions, such as tender offers and continuation funds. Additionally, Paige has experience advising sovereign wealth funds in a range of investment activities
