

Matt Stockstill Discusses Outlook for Texas Private Equity in 2025 with The Texas Lawbook

JANUARY 24, 2025

Winston & Strawn partner Matt Stockstill spoke with The Texas Lawbook to discuss the outlook for Texas private equity in 2025. With uncertainty surrounding the fate of the Inflation Reduction Act, the likelihood of tariffs, and geopolitical tensions under the new Trump Administration, there still isn't a clear picture of what the deal space will bring this year. Despite these variables, many lawyers can agree that private equity will continue to help shape the world of Texas M&A.

"Texas is a great place to be right now if you are in the private equity space," said Matt. Recently, several factors have contributed to an uptick in new and established private equity funds looking to get more involved in Texas.

"The same pro-business environment that brings Fortune 500 companies to Texas brings new private equity funds, independent sponsors and family offices to Texas," Matt said. "Texas is also an attractive location for private equity firms seeking high-growth opportunities across various industries, as the market is ripe with potential acquisition targets."
